

YOUR ISLAND IN THE CANADIAN WILDERNESS MAROONED ON THE ATHABASCA RIVER

TOUR L

The Alaska Highway from Edmonton to Alaska crosses the mighty Athabasca River in the town of Whitecourt. Of the hundreds of big and small islands in the river none are inhabited, very few ever see a canoe or other boat.

If the lonely island in the Canadian wilderness is not yet checked off your bucket list, we have the one-of-kind nerve-tingling adventure to fulfill your life's dream. We drop you off on a deserted island with the necessary equipment and leave you to deal with the surprises and challenges mother nature might throw at you. After the pre-determined time we pick you up for the return back to civilization

We meet in Edmonton or Whitecourt where you can safely park your car or motorhome for the next few days. From there we drive you and your friends or family to the Athabasca River to load the canoes. All gear and equipment are stowed in the guide's and your canoes. You paddle one or two hours downstream and once you find the perfect island the guide helps to set up the camp, fireplace and toilet facility and to get you established on your island. Then she or he paddles away in one of the canoes. The second canoe is not needed until the guide returns.

For the next few days you fend for yourself, surrounded by forests, the sounds of the river, the northern lights and starry sky at night. You keep your island pristine and undisturbed, there is no need to cut down trees, hunting is not allowed at all, no garbage is to be left behind.

When the guide returns, the camp is broken down, cleaned up to leave as few traces as possible and loaded into the boats. Now you paddle a few kilometers down-stream to the take-out point. Here the car or bus is waiting for the drive back to Edmonton.
